THE RED CIRCLE

By ALBERT PAYSON TERHUNE.

Author of "The Fighter," "Caleb Conover," "Syria From the Saddle," Etc. Novelized from the Pathe Photo Play of the Same Name by Will M. Ritchey. Copyright, 1915, by Albert Payson Terhune.

June Travis, a Red Circle appearing on her hand, discovers that she is the daugh-ter of "Circle" Jim Borden, who tried to destroy his ramily and its Red Circle birthmark of crime. June, pitying the poor, robe a loan shark and is nimost caught by Detective Lamar. Mary, the nurse, clears June and the latter, in a man's garb rescues an incriminating cost man's garb, rescues an incriminating cost from the police. Seen climbing in her boudoir window, Jane is in danger of ha-ing her secret surmised by Mrs. Travis. Chief of Police Allen and Labuar are baffled by the appearance of the Red baffled by the appearance of the Rec Circle on the "man's" hand, which one of the policemen had seen on the "man" the policemen had seen on the "man" that took the coat.

"Smiling" Sam Eagan, a former pat of Jim Borden's, but now a "reformed" consider and jewel fence is a sisted by Lamar, in the hope that he might throw some light on the mystery.

Lamar pumps old Eagan without learning anything to add to his small store of information with regard to the history of the Red Circle.

information with regard to the history of the Red Circle.

June enters the shop to bid old Eagan arewell before going away for the summer, in time to save Lamar from a murner, in time to save Lamar from a murner on a track by the old cobbier. Lamar promises to call at their home in Surfton. Slans for the trip absorb him and he forsets Eagan for the present.

Eagan sends his confederate, Alma La salls, to operate at the Surfton Hotel ball with a painted Red Circle as a blind. At the beach, June Travis steals and throws into the ocean a terrible war secret.

She makes a successful getaway in a small boat, while the men who los; the plans in their search for the thief with the Red Circle on her hand are arrested for annoying ways. the Hed Circle on her form annoying women.

One of them, Tod Drew, well known to Lamar, telegraphs for the detective. On the same train with the detective is Alma Lassile, accomplice of "Smiling" Sam, who has come to Surfron to operate. The men are at the station to meet Lamar, men are at the station to meet Lamar. Walking along the beach discussing the case, they meet June.

June turned to wave her hand. She saw Drew and the count seize Lamar by the shoulders and shake him vigorously from his day dreams. She waited until the three men had set off in the opposite direction, gesticulating excitedly. Then she lifted her right hand, pressed it close to her cheek and laughed gleefully. She bounded up the steps leading to the Travis cottage with all the romping bolsterousness of a school-free child; stopping to laugh gleefully at every bound.

That night at 10, June sat before her dressing table, pulling little tendrils of hair out over her ears. She tilted her head, critically, to get the effect and smiled with satisfied vanity at the charming reflection. Then thore appeared in the glass another face, with smeethly parted, silver hair and deep, kindly lines about the mouth.

Still looking into the mirror, June reschedd up behind her and appeared to the politic beread to the mirror, June resched up behind her and appeared to the mirror, June resched up behind her and appeared to the mirror, June resched up behind her and appeared to the mirror, June resched up behind her and appeared to the mirror, June resched up behind her and appeared to the mirror, June resched up behind her and appeared to the mirror, June resched up behind her and appeared to the mirror to the mir

Still looking into the mirror, June reached up behind her and pulled the face down to hers, kissing the worn cheek tenderly. Mary held her close and they both smiled at the mirrored image. Suddenly, June ran her hand down the old nurse's arm.
"Why, Mary; you're all dressed up!" she exclaimed excitedly. "You've got on your satin frock. And there's your she exclaimed excitedly. "You've got on your sailn frock. And there's your coat and scarf on the chair. Where are you going at this hour of the night, you dear, old silly?"

"To take care of you."
"But I don't need anyone to take care of me, dear. And besides mother will be there."

'I know. But I'm going snyway."

'Now if you think I'm going to let you sacrifice yourself," began June tenderly. "you're very much mistaken. The idea of your sitting up all night, dressed to kill, at a ball where you'll be hored to death and most likely fall asleen—just hecause you have a lot of foolish worrisome ideas about me! I won't have it. Mary.

Fasten if for me, will you?"

June set down again before the dressing table to make it easier for Mary to adjust the pendant. A finfly powder puff that gave out a delicate odor of La France roses was lying near her hand. She seized it and playfully dabbed at Mary's rose, using the mirrored reflection as a guide.

"Stop it, lovey—do stop it." expostulated Mary, sniffling at the tickling swansdown.

"Let me fix you up, dear, if you in-st upon going to the ball," teased me, "Oh, I could make a beauty out dune. "Oh, I could make a beauty ou of you—a regular French marquise. of you—a regular French marquise.

"I know what you're thinking of." she said gravely. "But it's not there, now. It's gone. See?" now. It's gone. See?"
She held her hand close to the electric light over her dressing table. There wasn't a trace of the Red Circle.
